About NACTF

Since 2012, NIJC has received funding from the California Governor's Office of Emergency Services (CalOES) to conduct the Native American Children Training Forum (NACTF).

The purpose of the project is to address the unmet training needs of California tribes and tribal service providers who assist Native American children who are victims of or at risk for child abuse and/or neglect.

Project Sites

Eighteen (18) tribes and community-based organizations participate in NACTF. These sites have received technical assistance to improve their capacity to engage in and/or provide ICWA related distance learning, professional networking and client support services. To view our NACTF Project Sites, click here.

Trainings & Online Classroom

The trainings and courses offered online are designed for tribal and non-tribal social workers, child welfare workers, children's services providers, youth advocates, Department of Justice professionals, law enforcement professionals, elected tribal officials, tribal leaders, and all tribal staff or community partners who represent tribal interests in serving Native American children who have been abused/neglected or are at risk.

Visit our NACTF webpage to learn more about the online courses we offer.
TRIBAL SERVICES REPORT

With the help of The National Indian Justice Center (NIJC), NPC Research conducted a survey for the California Governor’s Office of Emergency Services (CalOES) and The California Children’s Justice Act (CJA) Task Force to assess the needs of the Indian child welfare (ICWA) system in California.

According to the report, “Survey respondents and interviewees described a range of pressing needs to improve the system response to maltreated and at-risk children in Tribal communities (i.e. ensuring adequate numbers of appropriately trained staff and increasing ICWA understanding and compliance)”.

Thank you for all those who contributed to this survey. The report is finalized. To view report findings, please click here. Please cite appropriately when using the report as a reference.

WAYS TO PRACTICE KINDNESS

Kindness means having concern for others and being able to show that concern through our thoughts and actions. Just like for adults, kindness is important and beneficial for children (i.e. social connections and well-being).

A recent study, Kindness Counts, with 9-11 year-olds found that children who performed acts of kindness on a regular basis improved their academic performance were more socially accepted by other students. Children who engage at an early age tend to be more inclusive and less likely to bully others as teenagers.
