About NACTF

Since 2012, NIJC has received funding from the California Governor's Office of Emergency Services (CalOES) to conduct the Native American Children Training Forum (NACTF).

The purpose of the project is to address the unmet training needs of California tribes and tribal service providers who assist Native American children who are victims of or at risk for child abuse and/or neglect.

Project Sites

Eighteen (18) tribes and community-based organizations participate in NACTF. These sites have received technical assistance to improve their capacity to engage in and/or provide ICWA related distance learning, professional networking and client support services. Trainings & Online Classroom

The trainings and courses offered online are designed for tribal and non-tribal social workers, child welfare workers, children’s services providers, youth advocates, Department of Justice professionals, law enforcement professionals, elected tribal officials, tribal leaders, and all tribal staff or community partners who represent tribal interests in serving Native American children who have been abused/neglected or are at risk.

Visit our NACTF webpage to learn more about the online courses we offer.
CHILD SAFETY MONTH

Child Safety Month is about creating awareness about the potential dangers children face in everyday situations and to use this new knowledge to prevent them.

KidPower’s 7 Strategies to Keeping our Children Safe:

1. Put Safety First. We need to make a conscious commitment to advocate for our kids, even if someone will be upset with us, even if it costs time or money, even if they get mad at us, and even if it’s embarrassing.

2. Keep your radar on. Stay in charge of what is happening with your kids. Insist on all caregivers and professionals providing powerful, respectful adult leadership.

3. LISTEN to your children and teach them not to keep unsafe secrets. Abuse and bullying thrive in secrecy. Tell kids that problems, any kind of touch, gifts someone gives them, favors, friendships, and activities should NOT be a secret.

4. Make SURE Kids know you CARE. Don’t assume that a child knows or remembers. Keep telling them and keep showing them how important they are to you. Don’t expect your child or yourself to be perfect. Respect each child’s right to be different.

5. Don’t let kids throw stones. Stop a child from being unkind to another with the same determination that you would stop that child from throwing a rock through a window. Model being firm, kind, and persistent when you intervene.

6. Assess each child and make Safety Plans. Remember that safety is an ongoing conversation, not a one-time lesson – and that kids need time and practice to develop the emotional, mental, and physical capacity to make safe and wise choices in real-life situations. Assess realistically the capabilities and vulnerabilities of your child.

7. Prepare children to take charge of their safety by practicing skills. One quick action can stop most abuse, bullying, and other forms of emotional or physical violence – using your awareness, checking and thinking first, moving away from trouble, acting respectfully confident, staying in charge of what you say and do no matter how you feel inside, setting boundaries, ordering someone to stop, leaving as soon as you can, resisting emotional coercion, and being persistent in telling until you get help.
