WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION

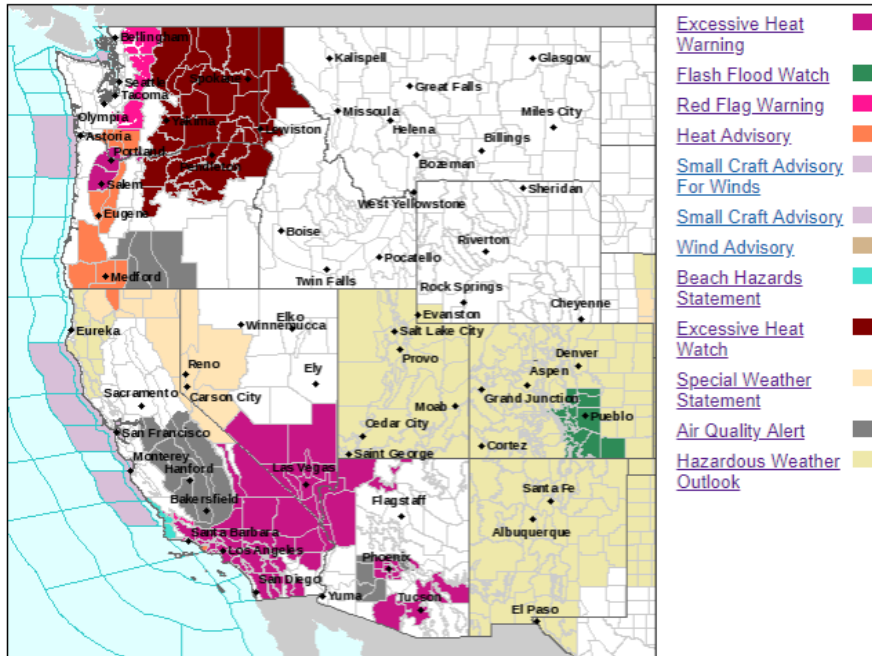

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

Building high pressure will result in above normal temperatures and low humidity this week. Poor overnight humidity recoveries expected on mid-slopes and ridges. Wind will generally be terrain driven with locally gusty afternoon to evening wind in the Coastal Range impacting current wildfires in that area. Locally stronger wind possible over higher terrain Thursday into Saturday. Onshore flow increasing Thursday through Saturday with temperatures returning to near normal. Smoke from wildfires will continue to impact the air quality.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

Continued hot conditions exist across the Southern California area through this week. Local Gusty winds will bring heightened concern for fire weather through this evening. Any low clouds that develop will be confined to coastal areas this week. Building high pressure will result in above normal temperatures and low humidity this week. Poor overnight humidity recoveries expected on mid-slopes and ridges. Wind will generally be terrain driven with locally gusty afternoon to evening wind in the Coastal Range impacting current wildfires in that area. Locally stronger wind possible over higher terrain Thursday into Saturday.
